1. VISITOR

As a visitor, I want to browse by category, so that I can find the style I have in mind.

- Given the mega-menu, when I choose a category, then the page scrolls to it and the navigation marks it active.
- Given a narrow screen, when I open the menu, then categories stack and remain reachable with one thumb.

As a visitor, I want to see a design at full size, so that I can judge the print quality.

- Given a product image, when I select it, then a lightbox opens with the full-resolution photograph.
- Given the lightbox is open, when I press Escape or tap outside, then it closes and focus returns to the image.

As a visitor, I want to ask a question quickly, so that I do not have to search for contact details.

- Given any section, when I use the enquiry control, then the form is reachable without leaving the page.
- Given an incomplete form, when I submit, then the specific field at fault is named inline.

2. BUSINESS OWNER

As the owner, I want enquiries to carry context, so that I can reply once with a quote.

- Given a submitted enquiry, then name, contact, event date and message are all present and validated.

As the owner, I want the catalogue to be editable without a developer, so that new designs reach the site the same season they are made.

- Given a new product added to the category data object, when the page is rebuilt, then it appears in the catalogue with no other code change.
